

I strongly urge the government to avoid diluting the Indiana Telephone Privacy Act with a new lower standard. I receive rare telemarketing and other annoyance calls compared to prior to having any such listing. It's great if you want to make this a national law, but don't make it such that the states cannot make more stringent guidelines. Allow the individual states to make their law tougher than the federal law. Don't allow the federal law to weaken the individual state laws.
